

A group of people, primarily women, are performing a traditional African dance in a large greenhouse. They are wearing black clothing with colorful beaded necklaces and headbands. One woman in the foreground is wearing a yellow and black patterned skirt. They are holding small, round, light-colored objects, possibly shakers or small drums. The greenhouse is filled with rows of potted plants, mostly pink bougainvillea, and the floor is made of large grey tiles. The background shows the glass and metal structure of the greenhouse and other people in the distance.
